

Robin McGarry

Consisting of three rooms, this master bedroom suite is infused with all the glamour that 1930's Hollywood had to offer. With a color scheme that mixed cool blues, tone-on-tone platinum and ivory, Weston interior designer, Robin McGarry has created a space that offers a serene and romantic escape from the commotion of everyday life.

Walls covered in an "opulent grass cloth" envelope the bedroom in soothing blue tones. A custom silk and wood rug grounds the space adding to the luxurious feel of the room. With feminine lines and a gently curved profile a pair of upholstered club chairs offers a comfortable spot to collect one's thoughts at the beginning of the day. In the sitting room directly off this area, Venetian plastered walls add a reflective texture and sense of refined elegance to that space. A hand blown Murano chandelier fills the room with soft light. "Though the original fireplace stood as one of the room's main focal points, McGarry said she felt that the absence of a television was also a prominent feature in the space." The elegant new sitting room has more than fulfilled her clients' desire to have room where they could relax in front of the fire and curl up and read. The master bath offers spa-like amenities and marries the soothing colors one would find at a seaside retreat.

Beautifully executed, this refined master suite design offers a peaceful sanctuary at the end of the day and a soothing spot to begin a new one.
